"SECRET" RADIO TO THE FUTURE

Waves That Can Not Be "Tapped"

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Nov. 21.
Secrecy of communication in war, abolition of cross-channel telephone cables, avoidance of collisions at sea, perfection of television, improved weather forecasting, and new achievements in medicine.

These, according to "Radio Round the World," by A. W. Haslett, are some of the radio developments we may expect to see in the immediate future as fruit of the discovery of "ultra-short" and "micro" waves.

The fact that a micro wave transmitter is very small, and only requires the power of a pocket torch to work, is one reason for its coming ubiquity. The other is the much greater secrecy it secures. The rays are focused on the receiver like a searchlight, and only stations lying in the path of the beam can hear.

Ultra-short waves, the author considers, will make a great contribution to the problem of communication in war-time, for besides their enhanced secrecy the waves are far less likely to give away the position of the sender. It was just this susceptibility on the part of ordinary waves that precipitated the battle of Jutland.

Jutland Example
"The Admiralty had information that the German High Fleet might be expected to put to sea," states the writer. "But confirmation was wanted and everything depended on the British Fleet putting to sea at the right moment. It was then that radio-direction-finders played their part. One particular ship in the German harbour of Wilhelmshaven had been particularly talkative, and every time that its commander spoke the position of his ship was checked by the English watchers.

"The crucial moment came during broad daylight. The bearing of the talkative warship as taken by all the English stations suddenly changed by a degree and a half. The deduction was made by the Admiralty that this ship—and probably the rest of the German Fleet—had left its moorings and moved a few miles down the River Jade towards the sea. The British Fleet was given its sailing orders, and the result, as all the world knows, was the Battle of Jutland."

Running Comment!

Two flashes of illumination from London Sessions to-day: Counsel, to a woman telling how she chased a suspect; Being a man he could run faster than you?

The deputy chairman: That does not follow. A woman can run after a man nowadays just as he can run away!

The chairman, to a detective: Do you know anything in the prisoner's favour?

The detective: Yes, he is a single man.

SHAKESPEARE REWRITTEN

To Be Produced
In Russia

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Nov. 21.
Six Elizabethan plays will be produced in Moscow during the 1934-5 season. They are "Twelfth Night," "Othello," "All's Well that Ends Well," "Romeo and Juliet," Fletcher's "The Spanish Curate," and Ben Jonson's "Volpone."

What is spoken of as the most important theatrical event, however, is "Egyptian Nights," a forthcoming production of the Kamerny Theatre. Talrov, the director of the theatre and the author of the play, describes it as a "synthesis" of three art creations—Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," and "Egyptian Nights," the work of the Russian poet Pushkin.

Talrov worked on this manuscript for two years. He believes that he has now produced a well-integrated play in which he has utilised to great advantage the artistic researches of the trinity of artists whose work he has built on. He states that he has created "a drama that expresses the struggle between two epochs—the struggle between Egypt in the throes of cultural awakening and aggressive Roman Imperialism."

The composer, Sergei Prokofiev, has written the music for this production.

BY-WAYS ROUND THE RODINGS

Villages Of Charm Near London

In a forgotten corner of Essex, within twenty-five miles of London and only a few miles from noisy arteries carrying ceaseless traffic to the north and east, lies a most delightful tract of "real country." It is so remote and unsophisticated, and so far from railways, that it is almost impossible to realise the Metropolis is within such a close distance.

There the River Roding, winding through a low vale, and picked out by lines of feathery trees, gives name to a whole cluster of villages—the Roothings or Rodings as they are known—which are particularly appealing to the car wanderer in search of pastoral country and quiet places. You must go by side-roads, and you must travel slowly, constantly retracing your wheel-tracks, and as constantly turning off to "right and left as something calls your attention, forgetful of time, if you would miss none of their charms.

A Run for Autumn Days

Here is a leisurely drive for a short autumn day, one I have always found exceedingly attractive—more so perhaps in the mellow sunshine than at any other time of the year.

Take the road to Woodford and on through Epping as far as Harlow, where you turn right for Hatfield Heath; after crossing the broad open common with its picturesque church, turn again on to the Chelmsford road. In a few miles you come to the first of the Rodings. White Roding, which incorporates Mores Roding in its parish. And here begins the peculiar loveliness of the Rodings.

Turn right at the Whalebone Inn for Abbess Roding, passing on the way White Roding Mill, a fine example of mill in an excellent state of preservation, and later Maccalls Bury, a moated farm with some magnificent barns. The farm buildings of Essex are usually well built and of large capacity, especially the great barns constructed before the days of the agricultural depression, for the "tall Essex wheat" which used to cover many acres in this county renowned for its corn. There are few sights more lovely than a tract of country thus cultivated just before harvest-time.

Near Abbess Roding is Rookwood Hall, a fine old manorhouse from which it is said a subterranean passage runs to Colville Hall, near White Roding. Turn off left in Abbess Roding, then right and left again for Bird's Green. Neatly, at Moreton, is another fine old windmill, bordered by thatched cottages, and it is well worth a visit. It can be reached by way of Fyfield. Just after Bird's Green it is worth while branching off to the right for about a mile to the twin villages of Willingale, Spain and Willingale Doe, where you will see the rare sight of two churches in one churchyard.

If you retrace your tracks and cross the River Roding, Beauchamp Roding church will be seen standing alone on a small hill, the few scattered cottages below comprising the village. Across the fields, and through the trees on the right, you may catch a glimpse of another church, that of Berners Roding.

For a short way the road follows the windings of the River Roding and then bears off right to Margaret Roding, on a main road which is almost as quiet as the lanes you have just left. The beautiful little Norman church of Margaret Roding can easily be missed, as it stands well back from the road almost hidden by a tiny wood. On the south door of the church you can still see the sanctuary ring on which people in the historic past used to claim refuge. The interior contains an enormous, iron-bound parish chest, claimed to be the largest of its kind in the country.

The first church of the Rodings to be roofed with lead was that of Leaden Roding, which you reach next. Hence the name. Leave the main road here, quiet as it is, turning right at the cross-roads down a road which is little more than a lane, and gives you charm in miniature, little views, little hills. It leads you at length past the ruined shell of an ancient windmill to High Easter, a village of half-timbered houses and thatched cottages, with an imposing church tucked away behind an inn.

Retrace your tracks again to the outskirts of the village and turn right down a beautiful old road to Aythorpe Roding, whose cottages are scattered over a wide radius. At Aythorpe Roding cross-roads stands the Axe and Compasses, a thatched inn of a type which is fast disappearing from our roadsides. The timbered interior, with its hanging oil lamps, produces an authentic old-world atmosphere. Electric lighting has yet to find its way to these parts.

It is but a short way now to the last but not the least of the Rodings. High Roding is the largest of all, and its long main street is lined with thatched white cottages and old houses, many of which have stood for hundreds of years. At the end of the village you begin your home ward way by turning left for Great Canfield, where you cross the River Roding for the last time.

More winding and wooded lanes lead you to Takely and Bishop's Stortford, whence you may strike across the map to Ware and Hertford, or in another direction quickly cover the twenty-old miles back to noisy London via Harlow and Epping.

MOTOR JOTTINGS

ENDURANCE TESTING

Endurance testing, where all types of automobile electrical equipment are run under the most arduous conditions to destruction, has been brought to a fine art at the works of Joseph Lucas, Ltd., at Birmingham. The tests carried out enable observations to be made on what is equivalent to strenuous road service in the course of days. Observations are made systematically, and the cause of breakdown carefully analysed.

Take, for instance, a test on starting motors. Two starters are mounted so that their pinions engage with the flywheel of an engine. Automatic switching is arranged so that each starter operates about 4 times a minute. This means in a 24-hour day, more than 5,000 starts—possibly more than a year's ordinary road service. Even so, the conditions are made much more strenuous than would be experienced in road service. For example, the voltage at which a starter motor operates is higher than is obtained on a car; so that the rapid acceleration of the pinion makes the engagement with the flywheel more severe than is obtained in service.

Another example is the horn endurance test. Samples are mounted in sound-proof boxes and are arranged to give 24 blasts of 1 second duration per minute continuously. These tests are recorded graphically and the time of failure is automatically recorded on a chart.

RULE OF THE ROAD

Although a new law in Austria making it compulsory for motorists to drive on the right-hand side of the road was to come into force on December 1, it now seems probable that it will have to be postponed. In Vienna alone the technical changes would take a year to put through.

As things stand now, there is a complete muddle. Thus, in the Tirol and Vorarlberg one has to drive on the right-hand side of the road, while in nearly all the other provinces motorists have to drive on the left side. In Salzburg the problem is even more complicated, in some parts the right being used and in others the left.

But perhaps the worst muddle of all is on the Glockner Road, where, after starting on the left side of the road, the motorist has later to change to the right, and then back again to the left. This is clearly an impossible situation, and since motorists in Germany, Italy, and Switzerland (Austria's neighbours) have to drive on the right side, and Czechoslovakia (Austria's fourth neighbour) is going to change from left to right, there is a general demand that Austria should come into line and choose the right side, too.

3,000 BUMPS A MINUTE!

Such important parts of the electrical equipment of a car as the instrument panel, switch boxes, ammeter, cut-outs, regulators, electric horns, etc., are very susceptible to vibration, which is apt to throw the settings out of adjustment.

In order to obtain data to enable them to design and manufacture equipment whose performance will be unaffected by the most severe vibration, Joseph Lucas, Ltd., employ a vibration test. Equipment is clamped to a hinged plate which can be subjected to from 1,000 to 3,000 bumps per minute—far more severe treatment than could possibly be obtained in service on the worst roads, or even travelling across rough country.

NEW BUSES ARRIVE

Six omnibuses on the Sinkiang-Suiyuan Highway arrived here yesterday from Kanchow, north-western Kansu. Besides a large consignment of fur, wool and other skins, there were 14 passengers, including Mr. Yang Hsing-chung of the Eurasia Aviation Corporation. The next west-bound trip will be made from here on the 10th inst.

TRAFFIC LIGHT SIGNALS

The two systems of controlling traffic signal lights, which are now most widely employed, are that operating on a fixed-time cycle and that working on a cycle, the length of whose elements depends on the flow of the traffic in and direction across the intersections controlled. Both have their advantages and disadvantages, and attempts have been made to combine the former and to eliminate the latter, as, for instance, in Piccadilly, London, where the signals are vehicle-actuated until the traffic attains a certain volume, after which they are operated on a fixed-time cycle. It is announced by the Minister of Transport that what is hoped will be a still further improvement is to be introduced into a very comprehensive scheme of traffic signals that is to be installed in St. Marylebone. This scheme comprises 55 road junctions situated in the quadrilateral which is bounded on the north by Marylebone-road and on the south by Seymour-street and Wigmore-street—the eastern and western limits being Cleveland-street and Edgware-road, respectively. The signals will be vehicle-actuated, but will also be linked up on the flexible progressive principle, while co-ordination will be obtained by the use of two master controllers, one at Marylebone-circus and the other at the junction of Marylebone-road and Edgware-road. Each controller will be fitted with a traffic integrator, which will adjust the time cycles of the master controller in accordance with the traffic flow. A certain number of the signals in the vicinity of Oxford-street will, however, be controlled by the master controller at Oxford-circus, which controls the fixed-time signals in Oxford-street. In addition, there will be five vehicle-actuated signals at independent junctions outside the area proper. It is stated that the work of erection will start immediately and will occupy over six months. The estimated cost is £40,000, of which 60 per cent. will be drawn from the Road Fund.

OSIRA LAMPS

"Accident-Proof" Lighting

In connection with the British Association Conference held at Aberdeen in September, the General Electric Co. of England, staged a number of demonstrations of flood-lighting and street lighting by means of Osira electric discharge lamps in special fittings.

Examples of this lighting were shown in Union Street, which was illuminated by 400 watt Osira lamps housed in Lewisham lanterns. These units were mounted on existing posts, and were 23 ft. above the roadway, being spaced about 125 ft. apart, in staggered formation. The lamps and lanterns, which greatly impressed the delegates to the Conference, were of the same type as those recently installed for lighting some 8½ miles of Lewisham; by the way, similar units are also being supplied for the lighting of the main streets of Greenwich and Deptford.

There was also a demonstration at Aberdeen of road intersection lighting at the junction of Bridge Street, between the Palace Hotel and the King Edward Statue. This was carried out by Osira lamps housed in specially designed diffusing lanterns glazed with 3-ply flashed opal glassware. This was the first appearance of these units for public lighting purposes, and their intensity of illumination was the subject of general approval.

British Marine Diesel Engines For Overseas.

Among recent orders received by Thornycroft for their Diesel engines are three of the 6-cylinder type, each developing 124 B.H.P., which are to be shipped to Shanghai, and others of the 18 and 45 B.H.P. types, which are destined for Singapore. There are already a large number of these units in operation in the latter place.

ANTI-NOISE CAMPAIGN

It was only the logical sequence of events that, after there had been so much controversy about the new Silent Zones in London and built-up areas all over Britain, some effort should be made to reduce the noise of cars generally. The move made by the Minister of Transport, Mr. Hore Belisha, to set up a committee, presided over by Sir Henry Fowler, consisting of scientists and motor and motor cycle manufacturers, to consider and report upon the principal causes of noise in mechanically-propelled vehicles, and the steps which can effectively be taken to limit noise, is, therefore, to be heartily welcomed.

Motor car manufacturers have, of course, for years been endeavouring to reduce noise and to make their models as silent and smooth running as possible; but undoubtedly a great deal can still be done. It is interesting to learn, therefore, that the Bestobell firm at Slough have for some time past been conducting experiments in order to ascertain whether asbestos can be used to counter noise in motor vehicles. Asbestos possesses remarkable sound-resisting as well as fire-resisting qualities, and is, of course, extensively used in modern buildings for these purposes.

One suggestion was that asbestos might be used in the form of a bonnet lining for second-hand cars. Engines with a long life of service behind them are naturally inclined to get noisier and noisier, and it is thought that the asbestos lining would at least assist in keeping the sound confined within the bonnet.

The Wrong Slant

"My husband had a job designing modernistic furniture, but he has been let out."

"What happened?"

"Oh he had the wrong slant on things."

The Importance Of Brake Efficiency

Both in the United States of America and in England increasing attention is being paid to the question of brake efficiency. The obvious importance of the satisfactory braking power of a motor vehicle is such as to provide ample justification for the attention which is being given to this subject. Defective brakes undoubtedly contribute to a very large extent to accidents, and anything which can be done to reduce the risk of accidents merits every encouragement.

In certain countries the problem has become so acute that special legislation has been introduced, making it compulsory for all motorists to have their brakes tested at regular intervals. Statistics are available which prove conclusively that the number following the introduction of such legislation has been reduced.

Considerable attention is being devoted to this problem in England, and one firm in particular, Rotax, Ltd., a constituent company of the Lucas-C. A. V. Rotax organisation, is taking special interest in the subject, for it has taken over the distribution of the well-known Bendix-Cowdrey Brake Tester, a machine for the scientific measurement of brake efficiency.

The function of the Bendix-Cowdrey machine is to test under scientific conditions the actual braking power of each wheel independently and, concurrently, the total braking power of the car.

It has been proved time and time again that the majority of cars on the road are running with defective brakes. A typical example is a car which, when tested, had a maximum brake power of 1,950 lb. This car, after being tested and adjusted on the Bendix-Cowdrey Brake Tester gave a total brake power of 4,500 lb. In one case, 90 cars were serviced in one week, and the results showed that no less than 78 of these had defective brakes, 10 had dangerous brakes, and only two cars had efficient braking.

The usual basis of brake service in England is a flat rate charge for brake testing and simple adjustment. The average charge in English currency works out at approximately 5 shillings. Considering that, in return for this small outlay, the motorist has the assurance that his brakes have been scientifically tested and adjusted to their maximum efficiency, it is obvious that, when the facilities for brake testing can be provided, the demand will be sufficient to justify the expense of the equipment from the Service Station point of view.

Although scientific in its application the Bendix-Cowdrey Brake Tester is a simple machine, both to install and operate, and although it is comparatively expensive, the importance of the service it renders and the extent to which it will increase trade makes its installation economically possible by medium and large-sized service stations.

A HANDY FIRE-FIGHTER

The only really reliable method of dealing with an oil or petrol blaze is by smothering, either by the use of sand or some closely woven textile material. In the event of an outbreak of fire on a car or commercial vehicle the objection to the use of sand, even if it is available, is the considerable damage it usually leaves in its trail. Asbestos, unless the textile material is of asbestos cloth it will itself catch alight in due course.

An extremely compact outfit consisting of an asbestos blanket about a yard square, contained in a quick-release casing, has been evolved by the Bestobell concern, whose works are at Slough. This can very easily be fitted on the steering column of a car or in a handy position under the dashboard, where it is ready for instant use in the event of fire. Among the advantages of this type of fire-fighter is the fact that it does not deteriorate with age.

ON FIRST STARTING THE ENGINE

There is considerable difference of opinion among motorists as to "warming up" an engine when first starting up. Some motorists start their engines and leave them running for several minutes before taking the car out on the road. There is something to be said for this practice in cold weather, for a cold engine should not be put immediately under load; but in warm weather it is unnecessary, to keep an engine running for any length of time before driving away.

Recent investigations in regard to cylinder and piston wear revealed that cylinder wear occurs much more rapidly at low temperatures than at a normal running temperature. It may, therefore, be assumed that prolonged running with an engine "idling" induces cylinder wear. As a general guide, as soon as an engine is running evenly after first starting up, the car can be driven off, although this does not imply that a high speed should immediately be attempted. In effect, the "warming up" period should be completed on the road, and this period naturally varies according

STREAMLINING DEVELOPMENTS

Considerable advance is apparent in the new coach-work at Olympia (says the well-known motoring correspondent, James T. Skinner, in "Modern Travel"). Contours have been greatly improved in every way. There are more artistic curves and sweeping effects, while most of the excrescences common to earlier cars have been eliminated. One notable example of the streamline trend is seen in the new 3½-litre Airline Talbot model.

From the pocket point of view there is much to be said for streamlining. It is a proved fact that a great part of the effective engine power of a car is used up in overcoming air resistance. Above 30 m.p.h. air resistance is formidable as a consumer of power. A more scientific body means more power available for acceleration, speed and hill climbing, less stress on the engine for a stated speed, and therefore a longer working-life, and, with a smaller call for power output, a consequent lower petrol consumption.

EMPIRE PENNY POST Early Restoration Urged

At a meeting of the Council of the British Empire League held on Wednesday last, the 17th instant, and presided over by the Earl of Strathmore, the following resolution was unanimously passed on the motion of Sir Henry Barwell, seconded by Sir Benjamin Morgan:—

"That the Council of the British Empire League again urges upon His Majesty's Government the importance of restoring at the earliest possible date Empire Penny Postage as a stimulus to Empire Trade."

In moving the resolution, Sir Henry Barwell said that "Penny Postage had been in operation in this country for a period of nearly 100 years. The increase in the sealed package postal rate from a minimum of 1d. to 1½d. was a war time measure but like many other war time measures it continued long after the reason and the necessity for it had ceased to exist."

Referring to Post Office revenue, Sir Henry said "In the last 10 years no less a sum than £80,000,000 had been collected by the Post Office as surplus revenue, or, to take the last five years, the figures were more impressive still with a surplus revenue of over £50,000,000, and for the last financial year alone the figure was over £11,000,000, so that this great public utility service, the Post Office, was a big profit making concern. It made profits through good years and bad and on an ever increasing scale."

"No doubt the Postmaster General was gratified, and probably the Government as a whole, but he (Sir Henry) could not help thinking that it was a short-sighted policy to make such profits out of the Post Office, because they had to remember that these profits were being made very largely at the expense of the trade and industry of the country. Those engaged in trade and industry were putting forward every possible effort to bring about and hasten trade recovery, and the Government should be doing everything in its power to assist this effort."

Re-establishing Penny Postage would help very considerably in this direction."

Sir Henry Barwell went on to say that he could not help thinking that from the Government's point of view the restoration of Penny Postage would be good business. No doubt it would be said that it would mean a considerable loss of revenue, but whatever the immediate result might be, he was sure that ultimately it would mean not less but gain, partly as the result of increase in postal business itself and partly, and more important still, from the increase in the volume of trade due directly and indirectly to the stimulus which cheaper postage would give. An enormous amount of postage matter which was now transmitted by the 1d. rate would undoubtedly go at the 1½d. rate because of the greater pulling power of the sealed packet, and many now using the 1½d. postage for advertising purposes would advertise more largely in this way if they had 1d. rates. They had the experience of Canada to prove that cheaper postage rates means a gain in revenue. They had also the experience of the railways with their penny-per-mile passenger transport to prove the wisdom of the policy which they now advocated in connection with the Post Office Department. They recognised and appreciated the splendid work done by Sir Kingsley Wood as Postmaster General but they could not help thinking that he might safely go further still.

BAGUIO GOLD TO EXPAND

Immediate Addition Of Equipment

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Baguio Gold Mining Company held December 3 it was decided to increase the plant capacity to 200 to 250 tons per day.

The directors have authorized the immediate purchase of the necessary equipment for the mine and the added machinery for the mill in order to bring the production up to this figure. Plans have been prepared in advance for the installation of this equipment and the work will proceed as rapidly as possible.

"During late September and early October, prospecting work began to show such results that it became evident that added equipment was necessary for efficient work in the mine, and that development work for 1935 would supply a tonnage of ore which must be sent to the mill, because of its average value," W. W. Harris, president of the Baguio Gold Mining Company, declared yesterday.

"The general superintendent in his report to the board of directors states: 'In conjunction with the mine superintendent I have made a survey of the ore reserves in the mine and I estimate positive probability and prospective ore at 231,550 tons of a value of $1,406,275.00 (based on gold at $20.87) or at the present market price of gold at $35.00 per oz., $2,378,004.00 or Pesos 4,753,208.00.'"

In view of the recommendations of the general superintendent and the estimated tonnage of ore as shown by the reports submitted, the board of directors have authorized the increase in the milling capacity."

WORLD'S HEAVY-WEIGHT FIGHT
Shown At The King's To-morrow

Coinciding with the opening of the local boxing season, RKO Radio Pictures will release at the King's Theatre on Wednesday, the complete screen version of the Heavyweight Championship battle between Max Baer and Primo Carnera.

Every detail of this great fight can be seen in the picture, with slow motion on the decisive action. In fact, one is able to see very much more from the picture than the thousands of fans at the ringside.

The Baer-Carnera Fight was one of the most discussed battles in the history of the ring, and was easily the greatest international sporting event of the year. Many thought Carnera would retain his crown, especially as Baer was given out to be a ladies' man and had neglected his training for the Night Clubs.

The local presentation of this film has been held back to await the return of the Fleet and to coincide with the boxing season.

EXHIBITIONS OF BRITISH INDUSTRIAL ART

(Special Air-Mail Service).

London, Nov. 21.

A street of shop windows is to be built at Burlington House, and new exhibits will be arranged fortnightly by experts for the Exhibition of Art in Industry, will open there in the New Year.

The exhibition will be the first all-British show of its kind, and is being arranged jointly by the Royal Society of Arts and the Royal Academy.

Mr. John A. Milne, chairman of the Council of the Society, claimed that the display will "astonish not only Britain, but the world at large."

The exhibition, he stated, would contain a dining-room living room, bedrooms, bath-rooms, a kitchen, nursery, and a terrace garden. In the case of articles used in the daily round women would mostly be the selectors and judges.

The main object of the exhibition was to demonstrate the absurdity of the too prevalent belief that good designs could be secured only outside Britain.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND

Coming To The Queen's

Actors and professional ball players join forces to figure in a gripping detective mystery in "Death On The Diamond," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational new production coming on Thursday to the Queen's in conjunction with the Rhapsody Girls Revue.

Based on an amazing story by Cortland Fitzsimmons, and dealing with a series of mysterious killings in a baseball team during a pennant race, the new picture blends harrowing bewilderment with hundreds of uproarious comedy interludes, and with a lovely romance, in a distinctively new form of screen entertainment.

Filmed with the cooperation of the St. Louis Cardinals, which team, as well as the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs, are seen in action, the picture was directed by Edward Sedgwick, former ball player and noted for his sports pictures. The quarters of the Cardinals were used for "location" for considerable amount of the action of the picture.

A baseball player is killed on the diamond, and suspicion falls on all characters in turn until the amazing solution in the very last sequence of the picture.

A notable cast includes Robert Young and Madge Evans in the romantic leads. Prominent in the supporting roles are Nat Pendleton, Ted Healy, Edward Brophy and C. Henry Gordon.

"NANA"

The King's Attraction

In transporting Anna Sten from Soviet Russia to the fragrant, gaudy Paris of 1780, far from her native manner, speech, or thought, for "Nana" her first American film, showing to-day at the King's Theatre, producer Samuel Goldwyn depended upon Miss Sten's genius and skill as an actress to transcend time race and space.

A good actress can do anything and be anyone, Goldwyn claims. And so, in the free adaptation that Willard Mack and Harry Wagstaff Gribble made of the famous Zola novel, Anna Sten became "Nana" billowing, full-lipped and full hipped; warm, white and loving the most notorious and the most colourful courtesan of her day.

Beside her marvellous Muriel Kirkland and Mae Clarke, as the other two of the three scarlet musketeers of the boulevards of Paris.

The rhythmic thumping of the can-can, with which the city of light shocked the world is heated; so are the naughty ballads of the day, with Richard Bennett presiding as dean of the Paris music halls. The glittering splendour of those music halls and the elegance of women who made pleasing men an art are seen again as Zola's heroine contemplates her degradation up to the very pinnacle of the society of the Second Empire, and to her downfall.

The war with Prussia is heralded in the martial persons of Lionel Atwill and Phillips Holmes, playing Colonel Andre Muffat and his younger brother, Lieutenant George Muffat, both victims of Nana's witchery.

Dorothy Arzner directed the film, which was released through United Artists. Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart wrote "That's Love" the bitter lament sung by Miss Sten.

FLOODLIGHTING LONDON

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, Nov. 21.

Part of the celebrations of King George's silver jubilee next year the principal buildings in London are to be floodlit, as they were during the Illuminations Engineering Congress a few years ago. During that period electrical experts received much criticism from both public bodies and private individuals, among them the London Society. Later in the display much of the criticism was modified.

The information is that the wiring to be laid down for the jubilee lighting will in all likelihood be of a permanent character. This will add considerably to the expense. It will, however, mean that any of the London buildings so wired can be floodlit on any or every big occasion.

AT THE QUEEN'S

The Barretts Of Wimpole Street

In Norma Shearer's new picture, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" now showing at the Queen's Theatre we have the pleasure of seeing three winners of the annual Motion Picture Academy Award appear together. They are Miss Shearer, who stars, as Elizabeth in the famous tale of the poetical love; Fredric March who plays opposite as the ardent Robert Browning, and Charles Laughton most recent winner of the award, who shines as the diabolical father. The performance of each is so finished, so smooth and rich that comparison is impossible. Never was there a more tender Elizabeth, a more poetic Browning, or a more demonic elder Barrett than these three present.

Miss Shearer, as the star, naturally carries the brunt of the film—and carries it with all the grace and charm and polish that made "Riposte" and "Smilin' Thru" the successes they were. As the invalid Elizabeth, she brings a poignant wistfulness to her characterization that reaches deep down into the heart of the auditor.

The film, as a production, deserves unrestricted praise. The thought, staging, and nicety of detail characteristic of all Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions are even more in evidence than usual. Director Sidney Franklin shows the touch of the expert craftsman seen before in "The Guardsman" and "Smilin' Thru" in the compelling tempo maintained throughout the performance and the mastery way in which the characters are handled.

Besides such titans of the dramatic arts, there is also a long string of excellent players in the supporting cast, including Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Forbes, Una O'Connor, Katharine Alexander, Marion Clayton, Leo Carroll, Ferdinand Mander, and Ian Wolfe, all of whom add their able touch to the glittering whole.

If you see "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" you will see a famous play made into a brilliant picture.

With tears in his eyes, Lewis pleads to inform the world the "Stingaree" is not a fish at all, but a notorious and handsome bandit who terrorized Australia in the late seventies. He was not only a daring rogue, but an esthetic one as well, and highly educated. Between his crimes he composed beautiful music.

The name "Stingaree" was coined by the crook himself when he said that "due to the exigencies of his profession he was a man without love, a human fish a fish with a stinger like the "Stingaree".

The picture deals with how he quit being a fish and won love by brazenly kidnapping a beautiful singer and forcibly wooing her with the idea of helping her career.

TRAILING THE KILLER

Opening To-morrow At The Alhambra

A primitive battle to a finish, fang against claw and no quarter asked or given is the sensational high-light of the latest world-wide picture, "Trailing the Killer," which opens to-morrow at the Alhambra Theatre.

This startling motion picture marks an innovation in screen presentation, depicting as it does a vivid drama of the Northwest woods, in true narrative form, and presented almost entirely by a cast of animal actors.

The thrilling climax is a desperate fight between a police dog and a puma, which has killed the dog's master. In his blind anger over the loss of his friend and master, the dog reverts to type and in a frenzy of rage attacks the most dangerous animal to be found on the North American continent.

Astounding as this incident is, it is but one of a series of intensely interesting scenes of wild life, which are as unusual and thrilling as anything that ever came out of the jungles.

"Caesar" the canine star, one of the most perfect animals of this striking breed ever developed, displays a degree of intelligence that is phenomenal. More humans must take second place in "Trailing the Killer" and Francis McDonald, as the trapper, Jose de la Cruz as a shepherd are among the five players appearing in this unique screen play. The balance of the cast is composed of mountain lions, wolves, wild cats, rattlesnakes, goats and other woodland denizens. Herman Ray, maker, director of many of the best "Bibi" pictures, also directed this picture, which is unlike anything yet presented on the screen.

A PIRATE'S MISHAP

London, Nov. 21.
Miss Marie Tempest's recent mishap in "Theatre Royal" has a more serious counterpart in an accident to Mr. Wilfrid Walter. In a dress rehearsal at His Majesty's Theatre of the new Bridle piece, "Mary Read," Mr. Walter, who plays "Calico Jack" Rackham, dislocated his shoulder in a too realistic rough and tumble.

Suffering great pain, he was rushed to Charing Cross Hospital, where passers-by were astonished to see a pirate in full war paint disappear within its doors.

Latest reports of his progress indicate that he will be able to appear as usual.

DECEMBER SESSIONS

No Case To Answer

Chan So and Chan Luk two Castle Peak men were discharged yesterday on the direction of the Chief Justice, Mr. A.D. MacGregor at the Criminal Sessions who were charged by Lai Kung, the complainant of Tai Ping, Canton, with two other men unknown of having boarded his vessel and took away $5 in cash, four piculs of sugar and four suits of clothing at Castle Peak on October 27.

Prisoners pleaded not guilty and the following jury was empanelled to hear the case: Messrs. F.
Normington (foreman), J. E. Kotwall, B. C. Lawrence, W. F.
Durman, Leong Po-shan, A. L. G.
Eastman and A. G. de Jesus.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant
Attorney General, opening for the Crown, said complainant with two men used a sailing boat to carry sugar and salt from British to Chinese territories and as these articles were dutiable, it could be presumed that the traffic was advantageous to them if the duty could be avoided. That point, however, did not affect the case
before the Court.

Crime Committed

On the day in question, complainant had loaded $45 worth of sugar and some salt intending to sail for Tai Ping, but being held up by a strong headwind, he anchored a short distance off Castle Peak shore in the afternoon. About 9 p.m. four men, including prisoners, approached in a rowing boat and, after ushering complainant and his folks into the bows of their own vessel, proceeded to transfer some of the cargo. Chan Luk carried a revolver but no actual force was used. The boat made off away from Castle Peak.

The police were informed and Chan So was arrested the next morning on the Castle Peak ferry which had just arrived from Lan-tau Island opposite, whilst the second defendant was apprehended in the vicinity of Castle Peak.
Both denied the charge. Chan So saying that he was at Tai Ho the previous night and the second defendant saying that he had been drinking tea and smoking opium with Chan Fui, a police informant. At the tea house where defendants lived, was found a quantity of clothing later identified by complainant as the stolen property.

Alibi Plea

Enquiries elicited the fact that Chan So had not been seen at the tea house the previous night and that Chan Luk had not been seen there between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m.
It would be suggested that as complainant was thought to be engaged in smuggling, the robbers did not anticipate that he would make a complaint to the police.
Both accused pleaded an alibi in defence.

Lai Kung gave evidence bearing out counsel's statement. He agreed that he carried sugar and salt.

Police Evidence

Police constables C. 111 and C.
191 testified as to the arrest of accused men and Sub-Inspector Kellett of Ping Shan Police Station described the boat and the discovery of the clothes.

Chu Kam and Cheung Fai spoke of defendants' stay at the tea house at Castle Peak.

A police interpreter, attached to Ping Shan Police Station, deposed to statements made by the accused when charged. First prisoner said: "I did not do anything of the kind. I was in Tai O." The second accused, in answer to the charge of robbery, stated: "On the evening of October 27 I took a meal with the police informant at Bai Oi tea-house, Castle Peak.
After the meal I also smoked opium with him up to sometime after 11 o'clock. Complainant had a grudge against me. I did not commit robbery."

Mr. Fraser tendered Mr. K.
Bidmead, A.S.P., for cross-examination but the prisoners declined to question him.

This closed the case for the Crown.

Insufficient Evidence

His Lordship said he felt he had to intervene at this stage of the case. He felt there was not sufficient evidence to justify his calling upon the accused to defend the charge. The complainant told one story at the Police Court hearing and had seen it to tell another story this morning. There were many discrepancies. Complainant was the only person who identified the accused. He was satisfied that the accused had boarded the sampan then he stated that only three boarded it.

He identified the accused because the second prisoner flashed his torch about. Complainant had also stated that the robbers, on boarding the craft, tore down the awning. They had it in evidence from Sub-Inspector Kellett that the awning was intact.

Mr. Fraser asked leave to consult with the police officer in charge of the case. After a brief consultation, the Crown prosecutor said it was with confidence he left the case entirely in his Lordship's hands.

On his Lordship's direction, the jury returned a formal verdict of "Not Guilty" against both accused, and they were accordingly discharged.

Assault On Steamer

An assault on the s.s. Sirdhana on October 31 last was mentioned at the Supreme Court yesterday
when Ho Kam Chuen and Ho Yat Fa appeared before the Chief Justice, His Honour Mr. A. D. A.
MacGregor, on a charge of assaulting Hon Cook Sik and causing him actual bodily harm.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General, prosecuted. The accused were not represented.

The following were called to serve on the jury: Messrs. W. C.
Lyon (Foreman), G. A. Harriman,
J. F. Grose, A. M. M. Stephen, G.
A. Bond, F. J. Wilkinson, Chow
Chun Cheung.

Outlining the case for the Crown, Mr. Fraser said that the two defendants were Fokienese and were boarding house runners.
On the day in question, the Sirdhana was tied up at the wharf at 7 o'clock in the morning. One of the accused asked the brother of the injured man for the return of a debt of $150. The injured man was also asked about this debt and he replied that he would pay it some days later, or words to that effect.

Concerted Attack

There then followed, what appeared to have been a concerted attack upon the injured man and his brother. There were in company of the two accused a number of "fokis" and while the fokis set upon the injured man's brother, the two accused set upon the injured man, one of them pushing him down the hold of the ship, causing him an injury to his spine, which, while not breaking the spinal cord has caused him to be in hospital ever since. His condition is such that he could not attend court to give evidence.

The first accused was arrested on the gangway of the ship and the second accused on the wharf below. When arrested the first defendant said that it was his folks who were responsible for the assault and the second claimed that he was not present.

Medical evidence was given by Dr. Court who said that the accused would have to wear a plaster jacket for three months and after that he would not be able to do any heavy work for three months.
In answer to a question by the Court, witness said that it was sheer good luck that the spinal cord was not broken.

After further evidence in support of Mr. Fraser's opening had been given, the case was adjourned.

Lo Fuk, charged at the Criminal Sessions, before Mr. Justice Jicks yesterday, with the possession of a revolver and five rounds of ammunition without a licence on November 8, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years hard labour.

In a statement made to the police, accused was alleged to have said: "I used them to commit a robbery." The Court interpreter said the prisoner's statement was: "I wanted them to commit robbery."

Li Tim, alias Li Him, pleaded guilty to a breach of the Deportation Ordinance at the Criminal Sessions yesterday before Mr.
Justice Jicks, Fulmer Judge, and was sentenced to three years hard labour. Accused had been ordered to be deported for a period of ten years.

In another case of petty larceny, Lay Wing was sent to prison for one month for stealing a felt hat and a ball-peg from a shop at
No. 132, Queen's Road Central.
Deputy District Magistrate, Murray, said defendant was seen to take the articles by a district policeman.

Acting D.S.P. (R).
Hong Kong, Dec. 10, 1934.

When Cheung On, 60, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court yesterday on a charge of manufacturing cigarettes in the street, the Magistrate remarked that it sounded rather like using a sledge hammer to kill a mosquito. The cigarettes were already manufactured, and his Worship amended the charge to one of hawking without a licence. Sergeant Smith stated that the defendant picked up cigarette ends and made his own cigarettes from them. A fine of $4, or five days, was imposed.

DEATH FROM A FALL

The inquest into the death of Wong Pak Kiu alias Wong Cheuk
Lam, who was fatally injured as a result of a fall from the third floor of 157, Des Voeux Road Central on September 9 continued at Central Magistracy yesterday before Mr. W. Schofield, when further evidence was taken.

The jury empanelled, comprised of Messrs. H. J. Fountain (foreman), W. E. Broadbridge and F.
E. Silva.

Evidence heard so far was to the effect that the deceased fell from the floor following a fight with three other men.

Au An, an amah employed at
No. 157, Des Voeux Road, said that Shio Shing, her master, was formerly a merchant in California.
Witness had worked for him for 14 days as a cook and wash-man. She knew nothing of what happened on the night of the incident although she was in the house. She saw deceased sitting on the bed in the second cubicle, talking to her master, Shio Shing, and two other men, whom she did not know. Later her master, deceased, and the other two men, went out to the front cubicle but witness did not know what happened as she had to attend to her kitchen duties.
The men remained in the cubicle for about an hour after which witness heard the noise of a struggle and also two cries of "safe life," and that voice seemed to be that of the deceased. Apart from this there was no other sound. Witness did not go out to see what they were doing as one of his master's children was hanging on to her because the child was frightened. She could see several men fighting in a group and they eventually went out to the verandah. Then suddenly she saw something white falling from the verandah to the street and this proved to be deceased, as her master, and the other two men, all ran away to the roof through the kitchen. She saw her master, Shio Shing, and deceased fighting in the front room and the other two men trying to hold the deceased, but whether these two men were trying to help deceased or to strike him, she did not know. Deceased had been to the house on one previous occasion and the two men whom she did not know had on many occasions visited her master.

His Worship, at this stage adjourning the hearing until to-day, when the "boy" employed in the house will give evidence. It was stated that this "boy" was in the door when the tragedy occurred.

FALSE PRETENCES

Having pleaded guilty to four charges relating to driving private car No. 2380 without a licence in Wanchai, driving the car without the permission of the owner; theft of a clock from Mr. F. Hangland,
No. 13, Bay View Mansions; and obtaining two gold rings by false pretences from Mr. Kodaka, the pearl merchant; at Messrs. Komor and Komor, Chan Fuk Kin alias Henry Wong was remanded for 24 hours in police custody by Mr. E.
I. Wynne-Jones yesterday at the Central Magistracy with the possibility of a further charge to be preferred against him, namely theft of a watch from Messrs.
Alex Ross and Co. in June this year.

With Chan in the dock was Ng
Shun, 21, a marine dealer of Tung Street, who pleaded guilty to receiving the stolen clock. He paid $3 for the article, and was sentenced to one month's hard labour.
Det. Sub-Inspector O'Donovan prosecuted.

Two unemployed men, who have just completed short terms in Victoria Gaol for stealing, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court yesterday.

Tsang Fai, 23, pleaded guilty to stealing a piece of beef from a woman's basket in Jubilee Street, and was given one month's imprisonment.

Leung Chung was sentenced to six weeks for stealing hemp rope from outside No. 106 Queen's Road

BRITAIN SHORT OF SHILLINGS

Mint Blames Banks

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Nov. 21.

What is happening to the shilling? It is becoming rarer and rarer in Britain: its occurrence in a handful of change is almost an event.

A correspondent went out to solve the problem and found that the public and the weather are to blame.

An official at the Mint said that the banks control the output of coinage. "We merely make the coins and wait for orders," he said.

"It is a fact, though, that the banks have recently been making fewer demands for shillings, consequently we have a large stock of shillings in hand. People write to us and complain of a shortage. It is to the banks they should apply."

At the Bank of England, a member of the Chief Cashier's Office admitted that he had just received a communication from the Treasury which drew attention to complaints of a shilling shortage.

"But it is the 'Big Five' banks who make the orders for issues of coinage," he said. "We merely act as intermediaries between the Mint and the banks."

At the "Big Five" they said: "It seems to me that it must be the public who are to blame. We can always give them shillings if they are asked for. In fact, one of the banks has just paid in 80,000 shillings, for which it has no use."

"One of the reasons for the number of half-crowns and florins about is that large firms using automatic wage-paying machines have a preference for the bigger coins. Two taps by the cashier on these machines bring out five shillings in half-crowns; it takes five taps to bring out the same amount in shillings."

"But I believe the reported shortage is partly due to the weather. Shilling-in-the-slot meters for light and heating are the cause."

"With the coming of colder and darker days there is a sudden rush of shillings into gas and electric meters. The companies and it is easy to see, then, as quickly as before, and the shilling temporarily disappears."

AN ECONOMIC CRISIS

1,600 Years Ago.

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Nov. 15.

The only Roman theatre in England has just been excavated near St. Albans, and is to be preserved for posterity by the Earl of Verulam, the owner of the property on which the theatre was found, it was announced at a meeting of the Society of Antiquaries at Burlington House.

The theatre was large enough to hold 2,000 people, as many as the average London theatre of modern times, and is believed to have been three times reconstructed.

The excavations have been carried out by Miss Kathleen Kenyon, daughter of Sir Frederic Kenyon, formerly Director of the British Museum. They have also revealed a temple, the existence of which had not previously been suspected, and a hoard of 800 coins.

The coins, which are very small and made of bronze, have been examined by Mrs. Mortimer Wheeler, who, together with Dr. R. E. Mortimer Wheeler, has had general charge of the excavations at St. Albans. They are expected to revolutionize many of the ideas of numismatic experts.

They were found beneath a layer of mortar which formed the surface of the stage in the rebuilt theatre, and can be dated to between A. D. 270-300. Although of superb workmanship, the existence of such coins is a striking illustration of the severity of the economic crisis which at that time faced Britain as the result of the cutting of communications with the rest of the Empire by Vandal raids.

For stealing an axe, the property of Pun Hop, aged 33, a carpenter, at Boundary Street on Saturday, Wong Kau, aged 28, a coolie, was sentenced to one month's hard labour by Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court yesterday. Detective Sergeant Poynt, stated that complainant was making repairs to a door, and just left his axe on the door-step to get something. On coming out again, the defendant was seen walking away with the axe.

CORRESPONDENCE

(All letters intended for publication must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, unless so desired, but as evidence of good faith.—Ed.)

(To the Editor, "Hong Kong Daily Press")

Sir—Yolks! Gone Away! or whatever the appropriate noise or expression is, another unmuzzled hunt was again held at Fanling last Sunday!

I wonder if myself and some of my friends would be allowed to join the noble throng, bringing our dogs, with us, as I am sure there is nothing the poor brutes would like better than a scamper across country unhampered and unhindered by the irksome muzzle, especially if they realized "Master" was not going to be fined!

Yet to think that a few short months ago when the Regulations were first made to apply to the New Territories, the police at Fanling promptly started keeping their eye in by shooting any unmuzzled dog they saw on the highway; perhaps they are too busy with the gentry from over the border to deal with this flagrant flouting of the law at the moment, but wouldn't some of the Indian and Chinese constables from Kowloon and the Island enjoy themselves, think of it, a summons for each bound!

Another aspect, aren't the inhabitants of the New Territories entitled to the same protection against Rabies as the dwellers in the Towns? particularly as at one time the Government seemed to think that rabies first started in that district.

What compensation do the Hunt reckon to pay per nip?—Yours etc.
ONE LAW FOR ALL.

MACAO RACES

Dear Sir—In the report of the Race Meeting held at Macao on Saturday last in the issue of the Hong Kong Daily Press this morning, your reporter states:

"Before the first race, the drawing for the big Sweep, conducted by the South China Athletic Association, took place," which is a somewhat misleading statement.

This sweep is a Members Cash Sweep entirely organised by the Macao Jockey Club through its Stewards, conducted by a Committee appointed solely of Members of the Club.

The tickets issued being subject to the Members Cash Sweep Rules of the Macao Jockey Club only.

I shall be obliged if you will kindly publish this letter in your next issue.—Yours faithfully,
G. H. POTTS,
Chairman.

DEVELOPMENT IN ART OF FLYING

Military Or Civil Advancement?

(By Leslie R. Aldous)

There is something a little righting about these record-breaking flights to Australia. All our ideas of time and distance are being turned upside down. It is almost as though we had suddenly been introduced to one of the new dimensions that scientists speak about. Only a short time ago we were measuring the distance of the Antipodes in weeks. With almost the speed of thought, so it seems, we are being forced to consider the matter in terms of days. What further developments may be in store for the world—next year, or the year after, who can prophesy now soon?—baffle comprehension. Breathing space is needed to grasp the full significance of the latest aerial conquests.

One aspect of the matter, however, deserves serious consideration. Without detracting one iota from the glory of a series of fine aerial achievements, we may well ask the question, "In which direction is the art of flying to be developed?"

It is well-known that a "camaraderie" has for some years been growing up among the civil pilots of all nations. The majority would like to see the air become a great unifier of mankind. It is reported that the Dutchmen, who so closely challenged Scott and Black in the big air race, modestly declared that they were only doing their ordinary job as aerial postmen—only a little more quickly than usual.

Civil Development Diverted?

Unfortunately, many nations are at present developing the air chiefly as an instrument of war. Far more money is spent on military and naval aircraft than on the civil flying which might bring them together. Moreover, in some cases, civil aviation is being deliberately diverted from the most useful lines of development in order to incorporate features which might be useful in time of war.

Little wonder, then, that a strong demand is springing up for the abolition of national military and naval aircraft by international agreement, coupled with effective international control of civil aviation. At Geneva, proposals on this subject have come from the British, French, German, Russian and American Governments, while the smaller Powers have not been backward in suggesting measures to the same end.

With public opinion alive to the urgency of the aerial problem, there is small doubt that the Governments represented at the League of Nations Disarmament Conference could devise a satisfactory scheme. British citizens will be given a chance of expressing their own views on such a policy in the National Declaration ballot on the League of Nations and Armaments.

Consequently No. 303 (Fleet Fighter) Squadron will have six Osprey aircraft instead of nine, and the new No. 824 (Fleet Spotter Reconnaissance) Squadron, which the Hermes is taking out, will have nine Seal aircraft instead of the 12 JILF aircraft in the old No. 824 Squadron, which has now been re-numbered No. 825 Squadron.

PROGRESS IN CHINA

A certain note of pessimism regarding the future of China appears to have been created at Home by recent developments in the Far East. It is satisfactory to learn, however, that this has been dispelled when Sir Frederick Mase, Inspector General of Chinese Maritime Customs told his audience at the Empire Society in London of the steady improvement of Chinese communications and of the plans of the Customs Service for the development of the chief ports. The duties and responsibilities of the Maritime Customs Service are multifarious. Thus, besides collecting duties, the Commissioner of Customs in Shanghai is in charge of an elaborate preventive service, controls a strong force of river police, acts as the chief port authority in one of the greatest seaports in the East, and plays an important part in the local Conservancy Board—no sinecure in a country where the rivers deposit prodigious quantities of silt at all times. And these are not his functions. He is the Receiver of Wrecks; he may act on occasion as a notary and as a Consul; and the peculiar conditions of the great Treaty Port compel him on occasion to study the arts of diplomacy.

The Chinese Maritime Customs has been a unifying force when China seemed about to break up into rival States, and Sir Frederick Mase might have said much on this last subject if his position had not debarred him from making reference to contemporary politics. But a number of the observations which he made should serve to correct some false impressions. China is an enormously large country as well as a very populous one. Its internal communications were very elementary everywhere until recently; as the Communist civil war has shown, there are still vast regions where the lack of roads and railways makes it impossible for the Central or even the Provincial authority to maintain law and order, to develop agriculture beyond mere subsistence farming, and effectively to relieve the victims of famine, brigandage and pestilence.

One of the most promising features of China to-day is the attention which is devoted to road building, to the improvement of the great waterways, and to public health. It is only natural that a long time must elapse before the Nanking Government can impose its authority on the outlying provinces, but it looks at present as if its chiefs feel that their best policy is to establish peace and order, to foster trade and agriculture in all the more accessible parts of the Yangtze basin, and to avoid attempts to coerce the outer provinces, some of which are well administered.

It is a policy which may seem tame to Chinese students who have learned to hustle in America and timid to those Europeans who forget that the rapidity of political and economic progress depends largely on communications and transport and are apt to ascribe delays caused by natural obstacles to incapacity or inertia. Foreigners who know how the Chinese can respond to leadership such as the late Sir Robert Hart first gave to their Customs Service will take a more reasonable view of their capacity. Those who have studied the disturbed history of their own countries in the Middle Ages, when even highways might be impassable for a third of the year, will watch Chinese affairs with patience, encouraged by the increasing evidence that Nanking is following the right road.

LUNG-HAI RAILWAY EXTENSION

Shan, Dec. 3.

Laying of rails on the western extension of the Lung-Hai Railway between Tungwan and Shan in eastern Shensi, has proceeded as far as Chanchiao, about 4 miles west of Shan, provincial capital of Shensi. The entire line will be completed by the end of this month and inaugurated on January 1.

OPENING OF PLENARY SESSION

Practical Proposals Urged By Mr. Wang Ching Wei

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright.)]

Nanking, Dec. 10.

After paying respects to the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen at the mausoleum, the fifth plenary session of the Central Executive Committee was officially opened at 9 o'clock this morning in the presence of over one hundred members of the Central Executive Committee and the Central Supervisory Committee and over a thousand representatives of various organs.

The Chairman was Mr. Wang Ching Wei, member of the Standing Committee of the C.E.C. whose opening speech declared that the national emergency had not diminished since the fourth session and the only salvation was a continued policy of concerted national efforts followed since the last convocation.

Commenting on the successful Red drive, he said that the most urgent task now was the eradication of the remnants and clearances of Szechuen of the Communist scourge. The most important constructive measure was to rehabilitate rural conditions which depended on the abolition of exorbitant taxes and lightening the farmers' burden to increase their productive power. Although such measures have been passed by the National Finance Conference, the May drought hindered progress last summer. Some provinces are able to report certain accomplishments in that direction and, with untiring efforts, the goal of rehabilitation will be ultimately realisable. He urged that the proposals be based on practicality instead of high-sounding impossibilities.

MR. SUN FO'S VISIT

Shanghai, Dec. 10.

Interviewed on his arrival at noon after being delayed by fog, in the company of six members attending the C.E.C. session, Mr. Sun Fo declared that he was gratified at the impression of his trip to the South. Mr. Hu Han Min and other leaders of the South-west were enthusiastic over national unity and detailed measures will be discussed at the session. The South-west had no new proposals at present. He added that Dr. Wang Chung Hui will be proceeding to the North in a week's time.

THE NATIONAL CRISIS

No Less Acute Than A Year Ago

Nanking, Dec. 10.

Mr. Wang Ching Wei opened the fifth plenary session of the Central Executive Committee this morning with the words "the national crisis to-day is no less acute than a year ago when the fourth plenary session was convened. The ardent hope of the Central Government is national solidarity and the opportunity to work towards replenishment of the people's strength and development of national resources."

He said that the task of the session generally was to review the labours of the various Government departments and determine the lines on which future work should be based.

The opening ceremony was followed by a meeting at which the Judicial Yuan President, Mr. Chu Chen, presided. It was decided that the session last from five to seven days and that five committees be formed to examine the proposals for dealing with party, political, military, financial and educational affairs.

General Chiang Kai Shek was among the 106 members attending.

CHINESE CONTRACTS FOR BRITAIN?

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, Nov. 21.

It is understood that the members of the Chinese Government Mission, who have arrived here to undertake a comprehensive study of British transport systems, have power to influence in their report the destination of contracts for rail and road materials worth many millions. China has in view a huge programme of road and railway construction to open up the vast undeveloped areas of the interior, and this mission, headed by Mr. Yu Ts'ien, vice-minister of Communications, is charged with a preliminary investigation of European transport. Having already visited Germany, Denmark

BANDITS ROUTED

Ten Hour Engagement On Hunan Border

Changsha, Dec. 1.

Sanguinary fighting, lasting ten hours, occurred yesterday between the various Government divisions in Hunan and the 1st, 3rd and 5th Red army corps on the Chio-shan-Chuan-shan-Pai-shan line, along the Hunan-Kwangsi border. The whole line of the bandit forces was completely routed by the Government troops, who succeeded in capturing 4,000 rifles and 40 machine-guns. The casualties among the marauders amounted to 10,000. The defeated brigands escaped towards Siyen, northern Kwangsi.

To check the flight westwards of the Reds and to prevent them from entering Kwelchow, Gen. Wang Chia-ieh has telegraphed to Gen. Yu Kuo-tsai to despatch troops to Liping and Yungtung, in south-eastern Kwelchow, while Gen. Wang himself will lead his forces to Seipin and Chinyuan, in Kuo Min.

C.E. RAILWAY TRANSFER

Major Issues Settled

Tokyo, Dec. 10.

The Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Hirota, informed the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Yureneff, that the Japanese Government guarantee that the so-called Manchurian shall satisfactorily fulfil his obligations connection with the payment of the purchase price of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Mr. Hirota also proposed the formation of a "Price Reconciliation Committee" to smooth out possible differences in connection with the payment of portion of the purchase price in goods, thus removing two major stumbling blocks in the way of completion of the transfer.

Only minor details now remain to be settled and a satisfactory conclusion is expected in the near future.

Italy and France. The technical experts of the party will be given every facility by the Minister of Transport and the railway companies to carry out their task, and it is hoped that as a result certain branches of the British engineering industry will benefit considerably. The experts expect to remain in this country about three months, and their tour of inquiry will include an inspection of some West of Scotland engineering establishments.

LONDON NOTES

By The Air Mail

(From Our Own Correspondent)

London, Nov. 21.

While the House of Commons was silent there was a drone of voices in the House of Lords, and the Mace was in position on the Woolsack.

The ending of the session did not interfere with the legal functions of the House. Many of the red benches had been removed in preparation for the reopening of Parliament by the King. But three of the Law Lords sat on, hearing for the twelfth day the cause of British Celanese Ltd. against Courtaulds Ltd.

There was Lord Tomlin presiding, with him sat Lord Russell of Killowen and Lord Macmillan.

The House is draughty, and it was noticed that Lord Macmillan had a rug round his knees, a precaution the Lord Chancellor often finds necessary to adopt when sitting on the Woolsack.

Among the counsel in full-bottomed wigs busy on this important case was one prominent member of the Commons—Sir Stafford Cripps.

MULTUM IN PARVO

Only a portion of the public which enjoys Mr. W. G. Simmonds's puppets knows that he is a wood-carver of genius.

Yet his "Farm Team," with its noble cart horses, carved in wychelm, has been one of the ornaments of the Tate Gallery since 1930, when it was bought for £500.

Next Tuesday he is opening at the Grafton Theatre with his troupe.

Mr. Simmonds is not only the carver of these exquisite marionettes. He works his figures single-handed, invents their dialogue, sings their songs, and designs and paints the scenes for his miniature theatre.

"ALICE"

I only knew Mrs. Hargreaves in her old age. It was interesting then to detect traces of the original Alice in her habit of observing what was going on around her—and of keeping her thoughts to herself.

Mrs. Hargreaves had the dignity and something of the austerity of the Victorian grande dame.

Perhaps as a child she also possessed her counterpart's other characteristic of telling her fellows of their folly. If so, this had quite disappeared.

DEBUSSY'S BATON

A friend who was at the Toscanini concert in Paris on Thursday evening tells me of an interesting incident which occurred during the interval.

The audience had already recalled the great conductor about a dozen times. To the accompaniment of their continued cheering which could still be heard in the artists' room, the executors of the late Mme. Debussy presented the maestro with the baton Debussy once used.

The original intention had been to hand it to Sir Toscanini on the platform. As he has always refused, however, to appear before the public except as a conductor the ceremony was held in private.

Few of the audience new that when he returned to conduct Debussy's "Iberia," he was doing it with that master's baton.

ARBOREAL

Baron Frankenstein delivered a charming address on the forests of Austria and the comity of nations. The translation was easy, as he was speaking at the International Exhibition of Tree Pictures now being held at Grosvenor House.

"The Men of the Trees," under whose auspices it was arranged, are a society of tree lovers, with an imposing council presided over by Sir Francis Young-husband, and having the altogether admirable object of encouraging everybody to plant and protect trees.

The name has a romantic origin. Mr. St. Barbe Baker founded a society 11 years ago among the East African natives, with a special pass-word, badge and dance, to save the Kenya forests from destruction.

WHEN DOCTOR MEETS DOCTOR Dr. L. H. Lampitt, whose appointment to a seat on the Food Investigation Board has just been confirmed, is Chairman of the Food Group of the Society of Chemical Industry.

As such he periodically castigates chemists and scientists for failing adequately to study the behaviour of food in storage. On this subject he is recognised as an international authority.

In spite of this, however, he has none of the scientist's dry academic attitudes towards food. By temperament he is a bon vivant, by choice a connoisseur of wines, and by doctor's orders on a diet.

He circumvents his doctor, however, by taking his diet at breakfast and for supper, and lunching and dining normally. Only a doctor would have thought of that.

PRESIDENTIAL HOUSE-KEEPING

New Yorkers now know exactly what it will cost to take Mr. Roosevelt's house in East 68th Street, Manhattan, which is to let.

An enterprising reporter, posing as a possible tenant got the estate agent to show him over the house.

He discovered that the rent asked was $1,200 a year—the house has 14 rooms and five bathrooms—that the oil-burning furnace would not cost more than $180 a year, and that the electricity bill was not more than $5 a month.

The lease was for 31 years—or until well after the 1936 Presidential election.

KING'S HEAD HALL MARKS

The idea of commemorating the King's Silver Jubilee next year by a special hall mark bearing heads of the King and Queen is ingenious and pleasant.

At the same time the pedants may frown. For the head in profile of the Sovereign stamped on manufactured silver articles indicated payment of the duty to which they were liable under the Duty Act of 1784.

When the duty on silver was abolished in 1890 the duty mark was also omitted, and the Queen's head ceased to adorn the backs of spoons, forks, and all pieces of plate.

AERIAL KALEIDOSCOPE Few people share Lord Londsdale's courage and success in making the colour scheme of a car personally distinctive.

Aeroplane owners, however, are less inhibited in their choice of bright colours.

The Prince of Wales's plane, with its scarlet and blue of the Guards' colours, is now familiar to a large public.

On a recent visit to Heston, I was struck by Lord Aspley's Parnall Elf. Its fuselage is navy and sage blue, the wings and tail cream, with orange tips. Lord Aspley heightens these contrasts by having fed upholstery.

Beside it Lord Londonderry's liver plane, with his yellow and blue racing colours on the wings, looks quite modest.

Colours are, it must be said, scarcely distinguishable from the ground after the plane has attained a few hundred feet.

NEARLY A SMASH

Over the week-end I saw Mr. C. B. Cochran, just back from America. He tells me that the condition of theatre business there closely resembles that of London. Either a play is a considerable success or it comes off within a few days. The public seems to know instantly whether a play is worth support.

Though he says, candidly, that "Conversation Piece" is not a "smash" in New York, he claims that it is the third biggest success.

The biggest hit is "The Great Waltz," which was done in London under the title of "Waltzes from Vienna" and is playing to £10,000 a week (at par).

The second big hit is "Life Begins at 4.45," which is playing to £8,000 a week.

"Conversation Piece" is making between £5,000 and £6,000 a week.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE STUDENTS

Lead In Edinburgh Union Debate

(Special Air-Mail Service)

Edinburgh, Nov. 2.

General Sir Ian Hamilton, Rector of Edinburgh University, attended in the Edinburgh University Union a debate upon Sir Stafford Cripps in which the leading speakers were Oxford and Cambridge students. Much of the debate was on humorous lines, and the motion "That the House considers Sir Stafford Cripps a public nuisance and should be relegated to the House of Lords" was defeated by 125 votes to 51.

Mr. W. Gordon Murray, president of the Oxford Union Society, moving the motion, said they must condemn Sir Stafford as a political scaremonger. If once again a Labour Government should get into the same pitiful condition in which the Labour Government found itself in 1924, would not resign, he believed, but would transform Parliamentary government into some dictatorial form, and the man to do that would be Sir Stafford Cripps. Mr. E. H. Garner Evans, president of the Cambridge Union Society, leading for the negative, said it was because of his attempts to realise that "creative freedom" spoken of recently by General Smuts that Sir Stafford Cripps was making himself objectionable to some people. Sir Stafford, he claimed, had brought back a sense of reality to the Socialist Party.

HUNGARIAN - YUGOSLAV DISPUTE

Efforts To Create An Understanding

Geneva, Dec. 9. The Hungarian-Yugoslav dispute was the subject of lengthy conversations between Mr. Anthony Eden and the Italian delegate to Geneva, Baron Aloisi. Mr. Eden subsequently met the French Minister, M. Laval. There was also a meeting between the British and French legal experts.

It is understood that there were two very divergent viewpoints. France would like an immediate decision, believing that the longer the dispute lasts the more it increases the risk of some unfortunate circumstance dragging Italy into the dispute.

The British view favours temporisation, and objects to any attempt to rush the League of Nations into a snap decision.

Neither Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, or Rumania are inclined to accept this sober advice, and it is expected that the Rumanian Foreign Minister, M. Titulescu, will make a strong speech at to-morrow's meeting of the League Council which was adjourned at 3.15 p.m. to-day to allow the conversations to appease the somewhat heated atmosphere.

The Yugoslavs, it is understood, have demanded reference in a resolution regarding the responsibility of certain Hungarian officials, but not the Government or the Hungarian nation.

Falling this, it is hinted that the Yugoslavs will withdraw their appeal to the League and will seek satisfaction by breaking off all relations with Hungary.—Reuter

TENSION RELIEVED

Geneva, Dec. 9. Yugoslavia's decision to discontinue the expulsion of Hungarian citizens from within her borders, 30,000 of whom were doomed to exile and several thousand of whom had already been despatched across the frontier, has brought some relief to the tense Yugoslav-Hungarian situation.

The advice tendered by Mr. Anthony Eden yesterday has doubtless contributed largely to the decision of the Yugoslavian authorities.

Belgrade, meanwhile, explains that most of the expulsions were the result of a too zealous application of the regulations applying to foreign residents by local officials.—Reuter

SOME HOPE

Geneva, Dec. 9. After conferring with Baron Aloisi of Italy, and M. Kanya, Hungarian Foreign Minister, Mr. Anthony Eden this evening dined with M. Laval of France and M. Senes of Czechoslovakia, the allies on opposite sides in the Hungarian-Yugoslav dispute.

As a result of these conversations, the British, French and Italian delegates are working upon a draft resolution which, it is hoped, will be the first step towards bringing the parties of the Balkan quarrel towards some sort of understanding.

Mr. Eden will continue his conversations with the parties concerned to-morrow. The situation appears to be a little improved and it is practically settled that Mr. Eden will continue to act as rapporteur.—Reuter

BETTER OUTLOOK

Geneva, Dec. 10. A more hopeful atmosphere in the Yugoslav-Hungarian dispute prevails to-day as it is understood that progress is being made in the direction of a formula for composing the differences.

It is believed that Hungary will be urged to renew its investigations into the allegations that certain officials encouraged the Yugoslav terrorists with requests that the Government punish those responsible.

The most hopeful feature is the good understanding between the French and Italian delegates despite the fact that they are championing opposing sides. It is expected that Mr. Anthony Eden will act as arbitrator as Britain's impartiality is unquestioned.

Mr. Laval's proposal consisting of six pages in regulating right of asylum and control of political refugees will be handed to the League this afternoon. It is understood that the proposal urges the constitution of an international tribunal which is authorised to deal with all international political crimes.—Reuter

BOMBSHELL AT GENEVA

Titulescu Attacks Hungary

Geneva, Dec. 10. A violent attack on Hungary in reference to the Yugoslavian complaint regarding the assassination of King Alexander was made by M. Titulescu, Foreign Minister of Rumania, at the League Council. He said that never before had he realised the loss suffered by the death of Count Apponyi, Hungarian delegate to the League. Apponyi always kept discussions upon a basis of courtesy, whereas Hungary's critics were now confronted with gratuitous charges of provocations.

As a long resident in Britain and Switzerland, M. Titulescu asked whether in their history there was a case where refugees were allowed to have arms, training in arms and munitions and explosives. He twitted the Hungarians on their nice sense of national honour in this matter.

DELEGATES UNEASY

Most of the members of the Council were obviously uncomfortable at M. Titulescu's diatribe. Baron Aloisi gazed at the ceiling, M. Laval pined his teeth and Mr. Eden examined his finger nails. M. Titulescu said that even if the Hungarian Government had not contacted with Croatia exiles, it was a confession of remissness because its responsibility was involved.

Referring to revision, he pointed out that the number of discontented powers with existing frontiers was a very small minority of those who saw quietude and peace in maintenance of the status quo. Hungary was a most active and intense centre of the revisionist movement.—Reuter

MASS MEETING IN THE SAAR

German Feeling

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).]

Saarbrücken, Dec. 9. A monster meeting attended by 40,000 members of the German Front Organisation and which took place here on Sunday cheered enthusiastically when the leader of the German Front's electoral campaign, Herr Brueck declared that the Saar people were unanimously standing by the German Reich and Herr Hitler. Brueck warned the audience against the activities of the agents of provocateurs and appealed to the Saar Germans to maintain strict discipline.

The Trade-Union leader, Herr Kiefer expressed thanks to Baron Aloisi and the Committee of Three for their labours on behalf of the Saar population and reiterated the hope that the plebiscite on January 13 would repair the injustice inflicted by the Treaty of Versailles. Kiefer severely criticised the activity of the newly created so-called Catholic Party Group which, as the speaker pointed out, was chiefly supported by the bitterly hostile anti-Christian press.—Transocean Kuo Min

STRENGTHENING OF THE LIRA

Italy's Experiment Doubt

London, Dec. 10.

Italy's intention to defend at all costs the present exchange parity by commanding the foreign holdings of her nationals has resulted only in a slight strengthening of the lira in terms of sterling and gold currencies. Forward rates showed no improvement, thus reflecting uncertainty in the market here regarding the outcome of the present experiment.

In countries like England and the United States, where devaluation of currencies has not resulted in weakening the faith of the currency, or rise of internal prices, it is only natural that Signor Mussolini's heroic and clinging gold standard should encounter certain scepticism. It is generally opined as a step calculated to avoid accepting French credits, thus maintaining monetary independence.

Contrary to other newspapers, the "Financial News" advances the theory that Italy's action was not taken to bolster up the lira, but because the Government wishes to obtain all profits resulting from devaluation which the paper anticipates.—Reuter

AMERICAN CAMPAIGN IN THE DRUG TRAFFIC

Judges' Mistaken Sense Of Pity

Washington, Dec. 10. The clean-up by the Federal authorities of those engaged in the drug traffic is revealing agents whose arrests now total 765, most of whom are small dope dealers and owners of Chinese "hop-joints." Many of the worst culprits are still at large.

The Government agents complain that their moves to cure the addicts are hampered by the judges' impositions of light fines out of a mistaken sense of pity. In some cases these fines are paid by the drug ring, who regarded the fines in this nature of a tax on their illicit business.—Reuter

EXTENSION OF EMPIRE AIRMAIL SERVICES

Special Mail Bag Leaves The Commonwealth

Brisbane, Dec. 9.

The Duke of Gloucester left for New Zealand this afternoon after inaugurating the Australian end of the new Imperial Airways mail service by handing over a special mail bag with personal royal letters for England.

Two aeroplanes were engaged to carry 52,091 letters the total mail weighing 1,141 pounds.—Reuter

NEW YEAR PLANS

The air mail services between England and South Africa and England and the East will be doubled from the end of this year. At present there is one service weekly in either direction; in the New Year there will be two, but this duplication will not extend farther east than Calcutta or farther south than Johannesburg.

The first additional service will leave Croydon on Sunday, December 30, for Johannesburg, and the first extra east-bound service will leave London for Calcutta on Tuesday, January 1. Thereafter the bi-weekly departures for India will be on Tuesdays and Saturdays; and those for South Africa on Sundays and Wednesdays. The inward mails will reach London on Mondays and Fridays from India, and on Thursdays and Sundays from Africa.

It has not yet been determined how the Post Office will deal with the Sunday arrivals and dispatches, but it is expected that special arrangements will be made for the collection and delivery of the letters at the week-end. In this case the new services will afford the public much improved facilities for communicating with India and Africa.

QUICKER REPLIES

As present letters arriving from India on Mondays cannot be answered until the following Saturday, and those coming from Africa on Thursdays have to wait until the following Wednesday before a reply can be sent by air mail. With the extra services, the answers to letters arriving from India on Monday may be dispatched on Tuesday, and those to letters arriving on Friday can be sent on Saturday. On the Africa route the interval between receipt and dispatch is slightly longer, as letters will arrive on Thursdays and Sundays, and will be dispatched for South Africa on Sundays and Wednesdays.

As the extra services will be started in winter, when traffic is slackest on the European routes, no extra aircraft will be needed. One Heracles air liner will be transferred from the European section to Cairo, but the main effect of the extra services will be to require a bigger weekly mileage from the existing air liners. When it becomes necessary next year to amplify the European services for the summer traffic Imperial Airways will have at its disposal at least four new aircraft of high speed and small capacity. Without some further increase in the fleet it may be difficult to achieve any actual acceleration of services, and it may be assumed that greater frequency will remain the chief improvement pending the construction of new types.

COTTON'S PECULIAR POSITION

Britisher Captain Of P.G.A. Cannot Play For Britain

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Nov. 21.

In a letter received from Henry Cotton, British Open Golf champion, he states that he has contracted to stay with the Waterloo Club, Brussels, for another twelve months. With considerable regret he adds: "And so I will not be available for the Ryder Cup match next year in America."

There are good reasons for knowing that Cotton would have been anxious to play in the match in which, but for the existence of a rule governing the selection of players, he would, as open champion, have led the British team. The rule permits only players attached to British golf clubs to be chosen.

It is to be regretted that, at the moment, there appears to be very little prospect of any alteration in the rules which were drawn up to meet the wishes of America in the matter of "imported" players.

But one cannot help feeling that America might feel disposed to welcome the varying of the clause which prevents the British champion from playing in the next contest. It may be assumed that Americans will want to see the champion, the one Englishman who, after ten years of endeavour, wrested the Cup from America, leading the British side. They will be disappointed unless some move is made to alter the method of selection.

MR. RYDER'S VIEWS

Mr. Samuel Ryder, the donor of the Cup, said that the Professional Golfers' Association have the right to alter the conditions, "and I certainly think it would be an advantage to do so. But my opinion is that they won't. At any rate, I am going to talk the matter over with the officials."

Really the initiative should come from America, at whose special request the rule was made. It will be surprising if the public subscribe funds for financing the visit to America of a British team which does not include the champion.

The situation is Gilbertian, for, as captain of the P.G.A., Cotton will take no small part in making arrangements for a match in which he cannot play.

Trevor Wignall, discussing Henry Cotton's ineligibility for next year's Ryder Cup match writes as follows:

In those places where golfers congregate for the purposes of conversation—usually the well-known nineteenth—there is still much discussion about the peculiar position that has been created by the decision of Henry Cotton, the reigning British champion to remain in Belgium for at least another year.

When he returned to the Waterloo Club of Brussels after his last trip to England—he played, but without his customary success, in the big professional tournament at Walton Heath—he was rather undecided about his future.

Officers had reached him to take up new appointments both here and abroad, but he told me plainly that he preferred to remain with Waterloo if the terms proposed were suitable.

It did not take him long to fix up a fresh contract, but some will remember that I wrote at the time that if he did this he would not be eligible to play for Britain in the next Ryder Cup matches with the United States.

Now we are faced with this oddity.

As the captain of the Professional Golfers' Association a post that automatically fell to him when he won the Open Championship at Sandwich, he will have to sit on committees, help to select the side, and take part in the making of all the arrangements.

But because of a rule that many regard as a complete absurdity he will not be able to swing a club against the Americans.

The regulation says—as it also said in the case of Percy Allis, when he was a professional in Germany—that players who are not resident in Britain are not qualified for selection.

American lawyer

When our representatives last journeyed to the States I saw much of Cotton.

Like myself, he was primarily a reporter

On that occasion, it was a dispute with the P.G.A. about returning with the rest of the team on an indicated date that kept him out.

That was understandable, but most people are now of the opinion that the time has arrived for an alteration in the qualification rule.

If the strict letter of the law is considered it will be found that the Americans walked through it when they picked Leo Diegel to play at Scioto in 1931.

He is an American, without doubt, but at the time of his selection he was the professional to the Agua Caliente Club, which is in Mexico.

So far as I remember, there were no complaints about this. No British team can be complete without Cotton, and unless I am mistaken, the Americans will be displeased if he fails to make the journey next summer.

It is only about a week since I was asked to put up to him a proposition to meet Olin Dutra in Florida for the world's title.

Cotton turned it down on the ground that the financial arrangement was not sufficiently attractive, but I have not heard that any one else was requested to act as his deputy.

Henry is a definite magnet in America, and as the Ryder Cup games have at least to pay their way, there will be annoyance if he is not on the spot to swell the gate.

I have every reason to believe that if the matter were properly placed before the American P.G.A. they would willingly agree to the removal of the clause that has caused so much discussion.

No one in his senses would suggest that there should be a widening that would admit all and sundry, but Englishmen bred and born, such as Cotton, should surely be eligible to assist their own land.

And even that is leaving out of the question the fact that another Englishman attached to a foreign club may again become the captain of our P.G.A.

Why not have a friendly note sent to the Americans on the point?

I am convinced the answer would be satisfactory to all concerned.

MYSTERY

San Francisco.

Scientists will soon be in the South Pacific aboard the sea-going yacht Zaca for another attempt to solve the centuries old mystery of Easter Island.

White men first explored the island on Easter Sunday, 1722, when the Dutch explorer, Roggeveen, found symbols of a high civilisation, art and language whose origin none has been able to explain since that day except that the island was an outpost of Polynesian civilisation, but how the Polynesians came there, when, and how long they remained is something no one knows.

The museum of Natural History selected a group of scientists to hope that this time the secret of Easter Island may be learned. They are the men who are sailing on the Zaca, making its third trip to the island.

The yacht is owned and is commanded by Templeton Crocker, a wealthy San Franciscan, who has had the boat fitted for the trip.

The puzzle of Easter Island is contained in stone remains of houses, towers and immense statues that craftsmen of great skill carved from living rock.

STRANGE INSCRIPTIONS.

All of the relics discovered to date are of stone. About the island there are great stone statues on which have been hammered undecipherable inscriptions.

Men of science believe that deciphering of these inscriptions will tell

From what land civilised men migrated to this and other remote Pacific islands.

Who were the sculptors of the statues and the engineers who carried them from quarries some distance away and set them up.

The scientists believe, with these questions answered, they will have a wealth of new material on an old and seemingly highly cultivated people.

M.C.C. TEAM FOR WEST INDIES

Strong Bowling

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Nov. 21.
The selection of W. E. Harbord, the Yorkshire amateur, completes the M.C.C. team to tour the West Indies this winter.

The team, officially announced is as follows:—

R. E. S. Wyatt (Warwickshire) (captain), E. R. T. Holmes (Surrey), K. Faines (Essex), D. C. H. Townsend (Oxford University), W. E. Harbord (Yorkshire), Hendren (Middlesex), Hammond (Gloucestershire), Leyland (Yorkshire), Ames (Kent), Smith (J.) (Middlesex), Paine (Warwickshire), Iddon (Lancashire), Farrimond (Lancashire) and Hollies (Warwickshire).

Captain G. W. Carlton Levick will accompany the team as honorary manager.

Hendren has already sailed; the remainder of the party leave on December 15.

This team should be able to give a good account of itself in the Tests, even with Headley and company on the other side.

Plenty of Runs
The bowling is strong, with Farnes and Smith, the Middlesex giant, to supply the fast stuff; the Warwickshire pair, Paine and Hollies, and Iddon to spin them, and Hammond, Holmes, and Wyatt himself as more than useful stand-bys.

There should be plenty of runs among such batsmen as Hammond, Hendren, Leyland, Wyatt, Holmes, Iddon, Townsend and Ames.

The difficulty will be the order of going in. Only Wyatt and Townsend are regular opening batsmen, and if one or both are out of form there will be an awkward gap to fill.

Perhaps, in that case, the position will be given to Leyland who has on occasion made a success as a number two batsman.

CAMPBELL TO MAKE 300 MILE RECORD BID

New Blue Bird Fitted With Wind Brakes

Sir Malcolm Campbell plans to risk his life in proving that the brakes of the modern racing car are all wrong.

"Wind brakes," an entirely new system, are being fitted to the new "Blue Bird" which is now rapidly approaching completion in a secret workshop at Brooklands track.

The car has been fitted with a number of fins on each side of the body at the rear.

When, at Daytona in January, Campbell dashes over the measured mile at some 300 miles an hour, he will pull a lever which will slide the fins out into the air and wind pressure will stop the car.

That is if they work as the designers expect. If not...

Campbell, the only living man who has exceeded a speed of 200 miles an hour on land, will take the biggest risk of a long career packed with narrow escapes on this new attempt.

Brakes Would Melt
Ordinary brakes, as fitted to the average car, if applied at even 200 miles an hour, just melt in their drums, so terrific is the heat generated by the spinning wheels.

This fact has robbed Campbell of his ambition to be the first man to exceed five miles a minute on land.

Daytona Beach is only 12 miles long—a result, Campbell has had to cut out early in order to stop before he reaches the end of the course.

Under-estimation of his speed would mean that car and driver would dash into the sea at the finish.

The new wind-brakes will be a life or death experiment.

If successful—300 m.p.h. and am-tion realised. If not, the car may turn turtle or dash into the sea.

Closely-Guarded Secret
Details of the new car are a closely-guarded secret. Only the designer, Mr. Reid A. Ballton, and the half-dozen mechanics who are building the car, are allowed in the shop where it is kept.

Theoretically the new car is capable of exceeding the 300 miles an hour on which Campbell has set his heart, and, if achieved, will be the signal for his retirement from the sphere of motor sport, to which he has devoted his life.

Last year Campbell set the record at 272 m.p.h. He was grievously disappointed—wheelspin and lack of brakes had robbed him of the 300 m.p.h. on which he had set his heart.

On the way back to England he was planning a new car.

So the new "Blue Bird" has the windbrakes and also twin rear wheels, like a motor lorry. This will cut out wheelspin, and the car will reach its maximum in a shorter distance.

Gigantic Beetle
The rear wheels have been entirely enclosed in the shape of the body, to improve streamlining. It is a queer-looking "Blue Bird"—more like a gigantic beetle than anything else.

The engine is the same 2,800-h.p. supercharged Rolls-Royce which was used on the last occasion.

The car will be ready for shipment to America at the end of next month, and Campbell plans to make the attempt either on Jan. 19 or Feb. 15, when the spring tides will have rendered the beach in its best condition for record breaking.

MAMAK HOCKEY

VARSITY v. R.A.S.C.

In a Mamak Tournament encounter yesterday at Sookunpo, the University and R.A.S.C. played a drawn game of one all. Play was fast and exchanges even. Towards the middle of the first stanza Senior scored.

After the interval the Service Corps attacked for the greater part of the first fifteen minutes but the Varsity custodian S. S. Chin played a great game making many daring saves. L. Oliveira also did his share in defence.

From a dribble near the centre line W. Singh eluded the Service Corps defence to equalise for the Varsity.

CURRENT NEWS FROM CHINA

CANTON NEWS IN BRIEF

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Dec. 10.
The Commissioner of Customs at Shanghai, in reply to the telegram of rice guilds in Canton asking him to release the rice shipped from here, stated that the matter is in the hands of the Inspector General of Customs and that in the meantime he cannot release the rice. Rice guilds here are making a strong appeal for the release of the rice, which is intended for sale in Shanghai and Chekiang in view of the bad crops consequent on the drought. The customs at Shanghai suspect that the rice was not grown in Kwangtung but was shipped here from certain foreign countries. If the customs can prove that the rice was produced abroad, the entire shipment will be confiscated.

Fifth Plenary Session

High officials are taking a great interest in the fifth plenary session of the Kuomintang, which meets to-day at Nanking. The South-west leaders have several resolutions to be submitted through six attending members who are scheduled to arrive at Nanking tomorrow. These six members are attending the Congress in their own rights and not as delegates, but they bring with them resolutions of those members here who do not see fit to go.

These resolutions are sweeping and thorough, embodying the South-west circular telegrams of September 8 and 25, the 1931 peace terms, and the resolutions of the Fourth National Congress. To-day's session in Nanking is devoted to speech-making and routine process, and real work will begin tomorrow. By the end of the week, the Canton-Nanking relations will be clarified.

Nanking leaders wish Mr. Hu Han-min to quit Hong Kong and to stay in Nanking or at least Shanghai. It is even reported in Shanghai that Mr. Hu is willing to go to the capital, but this story is premature.

Reds Reach Szechuen

After getting out of Western Kwangsi, the Communist vanguard has reached the borders of Szechuen. Most of the Reds are located in the North-eastern borders of Kweichow. General Wang Chia-lien, Chairman of the Kweichow Provincial Government, does not possess a strong army to deal with the Reds and is merely trying to prevent the outlaws from penetrating into the interior of the province.

It is said that General Chiang Kai-shek, Chairman of the Military Affairs Commission, will send two picked detachments into Szechuen to assist the provincial troops in suppressing the Communists. General Liu Hsiang, leading military ruler in Szechuen, is now in Nanking in connection with the anti-Communist situation.

Kwangtung is now safe from further Communist menace, as all of them have left Kwangsi for the West.

RECORD OF TELEGRAPH MATERIAL

Nanking, Dec. 3.
Beginning January 1, all records relating to telegraph materials and apparatus must be stated according to the standard system (metric) of weights and measurements in order to unify administration.

An order to this effect has been issued by the Ministry of Communications to the various Telegraph Administrations.

NEW OMNIBUS SERVICE

Hankow, Dec. 4.
Omnibus service on the southern extension of the Sianyang-Huashien Highway between Sianyang, Kunguan and Tungyungiao, in the district of Lihsen, along the Hupeh-Hunan border, is now in full operation. The route starts from Sianyang in the north, to Huashien, in the north-eastern part of the province, and then runs in a southwesterly direction to Tungyungiao via Shaan.

It is a part of the National Highway which is to connect Lo-yang, north-western Honan, with Shichow, in northern Kwangtung.

MANCHU OIL MONOPOLY

Methods Of Working Now Announced

Changchun, Dec. 3.

Stabilization of oil prices and the elimination of cut-throat competition as a result of the establishment of a government monopoly will more than compensate oil companies for their losses in having to reduce their petroleum imports to Manchukuo and bring in more crude oil, an official press release stated to-day.

The decreased shipments of the refined product will be caused by the operations of the Manchukuo oil company owning a large refining plant in the Kwangtung Leased Territory.

The statement specially mentioned "Soviet dumping" for causing variations in prices. The proportions that have been maintained by various foreign firms in sharing the total import oil trade will be maintained, with the Standard-Vacuum Corporation holding 35 per cent. of the total, the Texas Co., 20 per cent. the Asiatic Petroleum Co., 25 per cent. the Soviet Union Petroleum Trust, 10 per cent. and the Ogura and Nippon Petroleum Companies, Japanese firms, 10 per cent. the bulletin stated.

Wholesalers Limited

Under the monopoly provisions the manufacture, importation and exportation of gasoline, kerosene, light oil, fuel oil, benzine and substitutes for fuel oil designated by the Government will be allowed only to firms or individuals who have been authorized to do so by the authorities.

As sales organs, ten monopoly offices will be established, one each in Anshan, Yingkow, Chinchow, Antung, Tumen, Mukden, Suiping-kai, Changchun, Harbin and Tsinghar. Warehouses will be erected at each of these places.

The number of the general wholesalers is limited to ten while the number of ordinary wholesalers will be unlimited.

Persons and firms now engaged in the oil trade who wish to discontinue their business will be compensated by the Government after their assets have been examined by an Appraisal Committee.

Applications from oil dealers to the Monopoly Bureau for licenses will be received until December 10.

First Wholesale Firm

Harbin, Dec. 3.
Organization of a general wholesale oil firm under the provisions of the new Manchukuo monopoly law was announced here to-day by a group of Russian, Manchurian and Japanese business men at present engaged in the oil trade. The new company has been capitalized at MY200,000 and has applied for a charter of incorporation and a general wholesale dealer's franchise for the Harbin district, the announcement said.

CHINA MERCHANTS TO ADD RIVER STEAMER

Nanking, Dec. 4.
In a petition to the Ministry of Communications, the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company reports that the balance of the £300,000 loan from the Sino-British Boxer Indemnity Refund for the four steamers recently built in Britain will be utilized for the construction of a river steamer and two 500-ton motor boats in China in order to meet increasing shipping demands.

The loan was for £400,000 but the actual cost of the four ships from Britain totalled £346,000 only, leaving a balance of £54,000.

According to the estimates of the C. M. S. N. Co., the remainder will be sufficient for the building of a river steamer and two motor vessels. The Company will be responsible for any deficit in case the estimates are exceeded, the petition states.

CHINA CELEBRATES

Shanghai, Dec. 10.
Two hundred motor-cars and thousands of people will participate in a mass demonstration in the Chinese city to-day in celebration of the defeat of the Communists and the opening of the Kuomintang Congress. Millions of pamphlets will be scattered by three aeroplanes from Manchung.

THE "TAISHAN" FEARED LOST

For Lost Ship

Shanghai, Dec. 4.

The British sloop, H.M.S. Bridgewater, which picked up four bodies at sea on Sunday 100 miles south of Tsingtao, believed to be members of the San Peh S. N. Co.'s Taishan, continued her search throughout yesterday for any further signs of a wreck. It was learnt that if nothing further was found she would be continuing her voyage, arriving at Woosung to-day.

The s.s. Taishan has been missing since her departure from Tsingtao at 2 p.m. on November 26. It is the general belief that the ship must have foundered.

H.M.S. Bridgewater sighted the four bodies to the north-east of the Wu Taisha Shoal, when she was proceeding to Shanghai from Weihaiwei. Latest information received stated she would search inside the shoal for any signs of a wreck, failing that she will search to the south-east of the Taisha Shoal, which is off the old mouth of the Yellow River.

The freighter left Tsingtao with a cargo of 3,000 tons of coal. She was commanded by Captain V. Hellebrandt, who is a Norwegian. It is understood that his wife is at present in Shanghai. The crew consisted of 32 Chinese, excluding more than ten coolies.

The manager of the San Peh S. N. Co., interviewed yesterday, stated that the s.s. Taishan was valued at $200,000 and carried a cargo of coal valued at about $30,000. If the report of the vessel's foundering were true, which was most likely, then the total loss would be more than $300,000, not including the loss of human lives.

The theory was advanced that the Taishan met disaster on November 27 last, as the company's local office received radio messages from the vessel twice on November 26, but had received no more since November 27.

THE 'NORMANDIE'

The Most Thoroughly
Fire-proofed Ship

The new 1,020-foot, 79,280 gross ton turbo-electric liner Normandie, world's largest ship, will be the most thoroughly fire-proofed passenger ship afloat when it enters the French Line's New York-Plymouth-Havre service on its completion next May, according to Henri Morin de Lincelava, the line's resident general manager here, who returned a few days ago from a three-months' stay in France, during which he inspected the mammoth new vessel from keel to bridge and from stern to stern, and conferred with the heads of the line and of the shipyard.

In speaking of the Normandie, he explained that the walls of all cabins will be composed of a sheet of duralumin between layers of asbestos, these layers covered with fire-proof paint; that in each cabin will be a fire-detector which, when the temperature of the room rises to an even slightly abnormal degree, will ring an alarm bell in the central fire station and at the same time automatically close all ventilators in the section of the ship involved, thus eliminating the drafts which tend to fan the flames. Also, in most of the cabins the electric circuit for each is entirely independent of those for all others, and in the ceiling there is a hole, accessible to firemen in an emergency, through which a hose-line can be introduced for the purpose of flooding the room. This latter is a device invented by Capt. Rene Pugnet, the Normandie's commander.

Independent Radio Posts

In addition to these, there are such equipment as several independent radio posts, which would operate even in the event of the central power plant being put out of commission; phosphorescent signs throughout the ship, which would still be visible to point direction to decks and lifeboats if all the ship's lights were extinguished; sufficient lifeboats to accommodate all souls on board, both passengers and crew; and the MacLachlan type of lifeboat davits which permit the launching of the boats, independently of each other, and on an always even keel, by a single person in a maximum of two minutes.

CUNARD-WHITE STAR LTD.

A Notable Agency
Arrangement

The old Cunard Line rightly enjoyed a reputation for foresight, as did the White Star Line too, so that it is not surprising to see the child of the merger of those two companies—the Cunard White Star Ltd.—inheriting, even so early in its life one of the outstanding characteristics of its parents. That is a fitting prelude to an announcement—just made by the Shanghai Office of the Cunard White Star Line—that the Imperial Airways have appointed as their general agents throughout U.S.A. the Cunard White Star Ltd. In addition the ships of the company will also be equipped to deal with all enquiries and book passengers for the Imperial Airways.

The time is fast approaching when more and more passengers will want to complete their journey by air after disembarking from the ship. With Cunard White Star express ships arriving at Cherbourg early in the morning it is easily possible, by flying, to reach most of the important cities in Europe the same day, and with their agency arrangement concluded, the details of such a trip can be made most compactly. Again, the various services of the Cunard White Star make connections from America for the various Empire and other routes flown by the Imperial Airways, and passengers starting from America and who are interested in flying to other destinations after arrival in Europe will be in the happy position of being able to fix up over the same counter, their Atlantic reservation plus all the details of their flying.

SHANGHAI MARKET COMMENT

December 4, 1934

There was not much business done on the Shanghai Stock Exchange last Tuesday owing to settlement day. There was, however, a much better feeling in the rubber section of the market following improved advice from the primary markets. Some business was done the next day in Shanghai Telephone 6% debentures at 100.50 and Shanghai Power 5 1/2% debentures at 96.75. The rubber share market was firm with a fair demand but very few shares were offering at present prices. There was little of interest in the general market during the following few days. The debenture was again on the easy side Friday.
Power 6% Preference shares were also easier being marked down to 138. The continued weakness in the Shanghai debenture market exercised a depressing influence upon both the general and the rubber sections of the stock exchange Saturday. Although rates were very steady in the rubber section business was very limited.
The rubber and general sections of the local share market continued to move within very narrow limits on Monday with only a small business passing. The debenture market had a steadier appearance, helped by the decline in native interest rates.

Final results on the Chinese Government Bond Market for the month of November were very uneven with net gains as high as 2.45 and net losses .65. Most issues, however, closed higher by fractions as compared with the closing figures for October. Only 3 issues lost by more than 1 point.

Movements of the month were characterized by steady firmness for the first two weeks with perceptible decline for the latter part of the month. Pronounced weakness was felt, on the days immediately before settlement as the money market became tight and this naturally reduced net gains for the month. There were substantial losses incurred upon the removal of November figures.
A mild effort was made to stem the tide on the next day but it only met with indifferent success.

Raw Rubber Market Opinion

The market has steadied considerably on more reassuring news and all round a better feeling exists. We look for slow improvement after the severe shake out of last week. We are quite sure the Dutch can and will control the native output and it is obvious that they are as keen on the benefits to be derived from higher prices as the British.

with Every Stateroom, Outside, Large and Airy

One thing about traveling on President Liners, entirely aside from their speed and the stopover advantages of their frequent sailings, is the luxury of spacious staterooms. All are outside, with deep-sprung beds and every modern convenience... adding the comfort of a fine hotel, with excellent food and charming public rooms, to a trip with good companions.
